Summer 2002
Vol.4, No.2

Sometimes Life is a puzzle. No matter how hard you try, it doesn't seem like there could be any way that the pieces could fit together ... You push, you twist, you even consider trimming off some of the undesirable rough edges, but there seems to be no solution...

But something keeps pulling you back... Once the framework has been carefully laid in place, it starts coming together. People get in on the act with you, for they want to have a part in the finished result, too. The more help you receive, the more the pieces start falling into place.

You keep referring back to the Master Print to see what guidance you can glean from it. You begin to see a light at the end of the tunnel. A piece you had been working on for what seems like forever, suddenly snaps into place. Another piece that no one considered would fit, meshes beautifully with the others, even though at first glance, it didn't seem like it could fit into such surroundings.

Eventually, after much work, the pieces are in place! Every one stands around and admires the finished product! They touch it reverently, as if it is fragile and valuable... The result is precious and you know that every piece in it had its part. Every piece was needed to create the masterpiece that lies before you. It is exactly as the Puzzle Maker intended for it to be.

You compare the finished result with the Master Print and you are pleased. You smile, and then you go on to the next puzzle....

MY WORLDVIEW IS EVOLVING. IS YOURS EVOLVING, TOO?

The events of this past year have given me a deeper understanding of the biblical analogy telling how some of us are hands, some are feet, eyes, ears... Each place, each person is a piece of God's enormous interlocking puzzle. I continually pray that York College will provide the world with individuals of character and conviction to be lights shining in a dark world, pivotal pieces in life's great puzzle.

One graduate at a time, York College fits yet another piece in its proper place. Mike Rush, York College Campus Minister, has seared in our hearts the image of life's fragile state. For nearly two decades, the Roehrkasse family has filled a space in Germany, teaching the lost of the Lord. A record number of graduates left York College this spring, and I am confident that each one is a step closer to realizing the part he or she will play, the piece they will be in the snapshot of their generation.

As the events and occasions in your own life snap together, one by one, know that we are blessed to have been a part of your puzzle. Whether you were a student here, or we've been associated in another way, it is our prayer that your experience with York College helped you identify your strengths, and clarify your goals.

Indeed, you are a piece of our puzzle, and for this, we thank you.

Sincerely,

Wayne Baker
President

Profile in Excellence

Don and Cindy Roehrkasse with their four children Rebecca (13), Amanda (12), Julia (8), & Daniel (6).

In the city of Hildesheim, Germany, little seems out of the ordinary with the last name of Roehrkasse. But ask Don ('78) and Cindy (McMickle '80) twenty years ago if they could see themselves today raising a family (three girls and a boy) and serving as full-time missionaries and you might get a puzzled look.

Though both are YC alumni from the Midwest, Don - Laramie, Wyo. and Cindy - Littleton, Col., their paths never crossed until they were both in Germany.

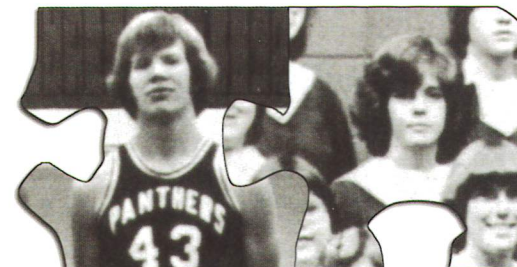

Don was recruited to York College on a basketball scholarship and was part of a "wild bunch" his freshman year. To say the least, missions was not even a consideration. However, through the influence of good friends he became a Christian after his junior year in college and spent two summers on campaign trips to Germany.

Don said, "This awakened my desire to come for a longer period. I originally planned to stay for two years and then come back to the States for graduate school or get an accounting job in Denver, closer to home. But then I extended for another year because I enjoyed the work."

Cindy, on the other hand, had wanted to be a full-time missionary since she was a teenager. While a student at York she spent time in the MAP program in preparation for foreign missions. Although she was not able to travel during her first two years, professors such as Dr. Robert Lawrence and Dr. Tom Schulz had a great impact on her life and her faith.

Cindy got to know Germany when her brother was in the services and married a German girl - Cindy and her folks flew over for the wedding and she fell in love with the people and country. She traveled back to Germany in 1983 through what was then the MARK Apprentice program out of Abilene.

Cindy worked for three and a half years in the west central city of Cologne while Don worked alone 150 miles to the northeast in Hannover. They began their long distance courtship and were married in 1986. After serving another four years together in Hannover they moved twenty miles south to the city of Hildesheim in 1990 to start a new church.

Don and Cindy were very involved in student life during their years at YC.

In an email correspondence the question was asked of the Roehrkasse's where they see themselves ten years down the road. Don replied, "After we got married, we both decided that Germany is where God wanted us to be, and that we would just stay in Germany until HE made it clear that He wanted us elsewhere."

"York College has been such a blessing in my life. Over the past four years I have been greatly known for my laughter. I realized that though home is a happy place, I never laughed as much as I do here. York is where I believe I truly discovered joy. Being in the unique environment that YC provides has given me a sense of peace and freedom that I never felt before and I have been overwhelmed by joy."

Mike and Janet (Reno '83) Rush with their boys Zach (16), Caleb (14), and Andrew (10).

York College Campus Minister, Michael J. Rush ('84), had a stroke Tuesday afternoon, April 16, in his office. A student found him on the floor able to talk but not move. An ambulance took him to York General Hospital around 3:30 p.m. and he was later transported by ambulance to St.

Elizabeth in Lincoln. By the time he reached Lincoln he was in a coma.

He immediately went into surgery and the doctors removed a blood clot to relieve the pressure that had built up in his brain. The clot was described to be about the size of a lemon. The neurologist said Mike had a condition called Arteriovenous Malformation, which he's had since birth and that the veins had ruptured.

The divisional chapels that were scheduled for the following day were cancelled and everyone met at East Hill for a combined prayer service. As students arrived they were able to sign up for ten-minute time slots on a 24-hour prayer vigil.

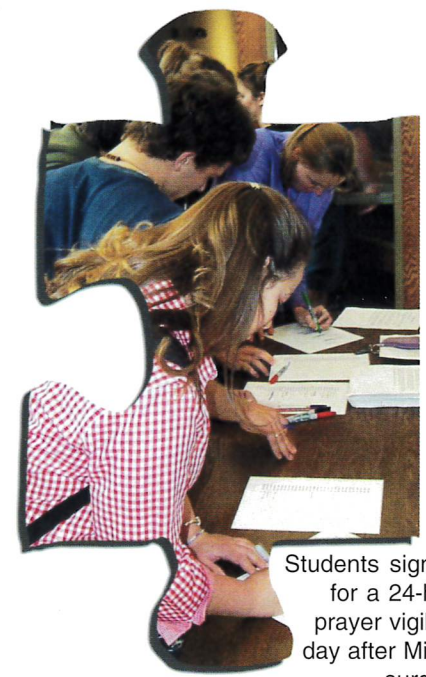

The hushed silence was a reminder of the gripping chapel service on 9/11.

Professor Shane Mountjoy ('88) gave a morning update to the YC family that he had just received from the hospital. "The doctors now believe the brain damage to be extensive and that there will be some paralysis in

Bridging the Gap

In an effort to raise money on behalf of the Rush family's medical expenses Leo Miller, Circulation Assist. at Levitt Library, challenged the YC family to outbid him on the outcome of his decade-old beard. A dollar per vote: handlebars, musketeer, imperial, goatee, etc. $150 was contributed towards leaving the beard as is, but the winning style was what Leo called the "civil war" cut. Over $650 was contributed in this endeavor. Leo commented, "It was worth every hair that came off."

PBL-SIFE in partnership with Heartland Campus Ministries held the Third Annual "York College Moving Home Rummage Sale" two weeks after graduation. Students were given the opportunity to donate a portion of their stuff rather than pack it all up for the trip home. Press releases in the local paper advertised the sale and gave the community of York a chance to donate items. The response was tremendous and a total of $3,635.46 was raised to assist the Rush family.

Students sign up for a 24-hour prayer vigil the day after Mike's surgery.

Mike's left side," Dr. Mountjoy read slowly. "It is likely that Mike won't wake up for several weeks, maybe even months."

The gasps that could be heard across the auditorium seem frozen in time. No one expected this kind of news. Graduation was only three weeks away; students would be leaving for the summer. Mike's desk was loaded with things to do. Hugs? (If you've ever been around 'Rusher' you know he foregoes the handshake and goes directly to a big warm embrace.) How can Mike not wake up? God, we need him here. Bring him home.

...And the prayers continue.

— Steddon Sikes ('84)

At the time of this publication, Mike continues to make slow progress. He is responding well to medication and physical and audio stimulants. Medical updates are available at www.york.edu.

The Class of 2002 made the history books as the largest class of seniors was awarded bachelor degrees on a beautiful Saturday morning. One hundred and eighteen students received their bachelor or associate degrees in their various disciplines.

U.S. Senator Ben Nelson of Nebraska gave the commencement address challenging the graduates to take chances. "Everyone will leave here with an education, but I encourage you to continue to make learning a lifelong experience. It is your greatest ticket in life. It can take you anywhere you want to go," he said.

"Others can help you, but you have to pay the fare. You have to learn to do the work, and education is not a one-time ticket — it can be renewed with new destinations throughout your life," Nelson commented.

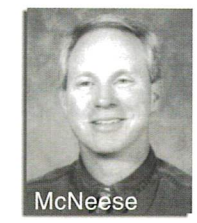

Dr. Ray Miller, Chair of the Division of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and his wife Gail Miller, Assistant Professor of Biology, came to York College in 1982. Their department graduated twelve students in the spring commencement.

He went on to say, "People who don't make it in life are the ones who don't take the opportunity to try. Yes, you might lose, but you also might win. But if you don't give it your best — winning and losing become secondary."

The eighty-three students upon whom the bachelor degree was conferred were also "hooded" at the completion of the ceremony - the distinctive features of the hoods representing the conferred degree.

Two honors were presented during the course of the morning. Tim McNeese ('73), Associate Professor of History and Chair of the Department, was awarded the Dale R. Larsen Teacher of Achievement Award and $1,000 for his commitment to professional excellence. McNeese has written and edited over 40 books and educational materials for young and adolescent readers, as well as college students and adults. He has taught at York since 1992.

The Dean's Award was presented to Oconomowoc, Wisconsin, senior, Allison (Schnoor) Morrill. A Middle Grades Education Major, Morrill graduated summa cum laude. She and her husband Kevin have spent several summers working in foreign missions including Albania this year. If they can raise additional support, they will extend their stay for two years.

York HERITAGE SOCIETY College annual fund

Bucks for Beds....

Wouldn't it be nice if all of the rooms on campus looked like the ones on basement south of Thomas Hall? The Department of Student Services has developed a long-range plan for replacing obsolete furniture in the students' rooms. The goal is to have attractive, functional, quality furnishings in all of the residence hall rooms. In order to begin the process, 100 hardwood beds will need to be purchased in 2002.

...for the "rest" of us!

If you would like to participate in this effort of providing new beds for the residence halls, simply send your contribution of $200 to:

York College
Office of Institutional Advancement

York, NE 68467

Make checks payable to York College and include on the memo line "Bucks for Beds."

Songfest

What takes about half the academic year to pull together and is a major part of the campus scenery, culminates in a two-hour showcase of York College talent and plain old fun. Audience friendly, Songfest has evolved into the year's biggest annual production, involving nearly a third of the student body. Hosts and hostesses, club shows, stage hands, costume designers, lights, sound... it's all part of the "York Experience."

It may have had its beginnings as a talent show in '77, but it's come a long way through the twenty-five year history. Instead of a single performance like its predecessor, Songfest students. Songfest is possibly the single greatest recruiting tool. Future freshmen actually begin the process of joining a club in their mind and see themselves on stage. I know it happened to me; I couldn't wait to be part of the show. Of course that was when it was celebrating its 5th anniversary.

This year's Director was Pamela (Rathe '01) Miller, a two-time hostess for Songfest. She and the rest of the Songfest Committee spent hundreds of hours in preparation for the production. Each brother/sister club had an award-winning presentation. Every hour put into the musical was apparent.

I give it two thumbs up. 👍👍

Students voted Becky Holton, Assistant Professor of Psychology, and Dr. Steve Sikes ('72), Associate Professor of Physical Education and Family Studies, as Co-Teachers of the Year. After completing his eighth year with YC, Sikes has taken on the full-time pulpit position for the North Central Church of Christ in Bloomington, Indiana.

This spring at the Phi Beta

Lambda State Leadership Conference, the York chapter of PBL received the Gold Level Excellence Award for its activities throughout the year, as well as members receiving 1st Place awards for their Community Service Report, American Enterprise Report and Partnership with Business Report.

These reports were then eligible to be submitted for competition at the National Leadership Conference to be held in Nashville this summer.

Kevin Henry placed first in Quantitative Methods, and he and Jeremy Cardwell took first with their Emerging Business Issues Team. Erinn Bristol along with Henry were named Who's Who in Nebraska PBL.

York's chapter of Phi Beta Lambda is directed by Associate Professor of Business Marti Soderholm. She's in her seventeenth year as sponsor.

MR. & MISS YORK

Mr. and Miss York College honors went to two General Science majors, Aaron Fletcher from Delta, Colo., and Kim Dreher of Port Orchard, Wash.

Fletcher earned Academic All-American honors for three years in cross country and four years in track, setting many of York College's athletic records.

Dreher played four years of varsity basketball and was a two-year All-America Scholar-Athlete.

Both are members of the Alpha Chi Honor Society and spent two weeks this past summer as part of a medical mission team in Kenya, Africa.

PIECING TOGETHER THE
YORK EXPERIENCE
 HEART MIND STRENGTH

My attraction to York College is based on a need for spiritual and moral growth that is supported by academics and athletics. In addition, I wish to continue to sort my wants from my true necessities; York is a step in that direction.

I used to look at York purely from an academic standpoint and in doing so, failed to understand its deeper possibilities. For me, college must be a place where, while good grades are expected, they're not everything. I am seeking the "York Experience" instead of just the "York Education."

We find our joy and our success in your joys and your success.

- James Gerhardt,
 Associate Professor of Business
 2002 Senior Banquet

A year of college life has ended. For some, the long trip home following graduation serves as the capstone to their "York Experience." We've had time now to reflect on our days just spent at YC, a place rich with both the predictable and the unexpected. Our memories crowd in thick with scenes of Homecoming, Club Coronation, Songfest, a campus performance. Each scheduled setting, each singular event forms the whole pastiche of life in this place we call York College.

Sometimes we watch; sometimes we are the ones in the spotlight, fulfilling our roles at center stage during a moment of campus life. But as each of us experiences his or her season in the sun, so we give encouragement to others as well.

Each one at York College has his or her own special place on campus. Perhaps it is in the residence hall, sharing a day's experiences with a roommate. It might be the student center, that noisy hub of campus life. For others, it's the library, our own oasis of knowledge. But for many, it's that walk across campus, from Mackey to McGehee, the grounds green and glistening from a spring rain, along a sidewalk flanked with red brick edifices from the past. Wherever that special place is, it probably includes a friend, colleague, or soul mate.

A campus swing sits empty. You grab it, along with one friend, then two. The challenges of college make some of us wonder if the trials and agony of text after text are worth it. But then we see the opportunities the YC Experience offers us: an academic degree, yes; but other bonuses, the lagniappe of our days spent here: opportunities for service to others, the challenge of sports and extra-curricular activities, and a deeper relationship with the Father. And, oh, yes: time spent in a campus swing with friends we trust we'll never forget.

Such things are the stuff of YC memories. And they are memories with faces, as our evocative visions stretch from across the classroom, the cafeteria, the residence hall, the basketball court, the church aisle. We may, years from now, forget the face, but we will never forget the place where it all happened, here, at York College.

- Tim McNeese

YC personnel spent an estimated 2,708,160 hours in educating the class of 2002. This includes preparation for classes, grading papers, exams and projects, counseling, befriending, and serving students, attending and participating in student extracurricular activities, serving them meals, welcoming them to do laundry in their homes, praying for them, worshipping with them, and a myriad of other ways employees minister to students. (Campus lights pictured above were purchased this spring by the Trustee Wives Chapter of Helping Hands.)

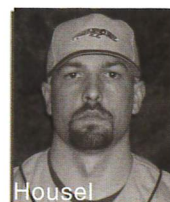

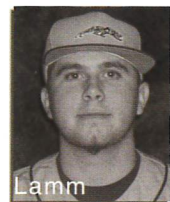

BASEBALL PROGRAM EARNS KEY WINS

First year Head Coach Jerry Laird now has a season of college baseball behind him. Laird took his high school team in North Little Rock, Ark., to three consecutive state tournament appearances (State Champs in 2000) before signing on with York College this past summer.

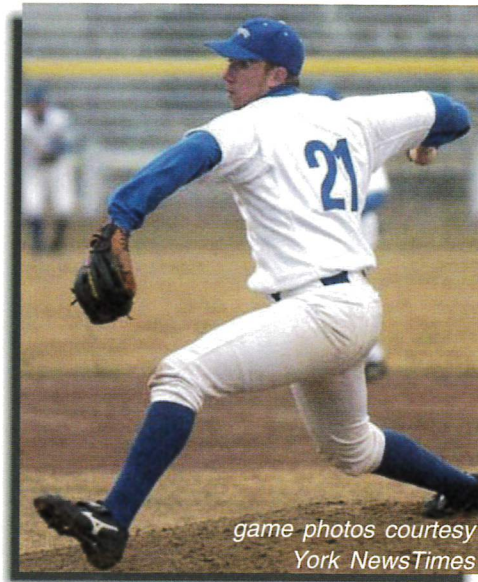

Despite the loss of twelve outstanding seniors from the record-making 2001 squad and having only two months of recruiting available, Laird put together a very respectable year. The Panthers finished the regular season 25/21 and 10/9 in the conference.

Among the season's best wins were those against NCAA Div. II teams Univ. of Southern Colorado, West Texas State Univ., and a double header sweep over the Univ. of Nebraska Kearney. Also, for the first time since 1996, the Panthers defeated NAIA perennial national power Bellevue Bruins 6-3 in one of the year's last home games.

Named to the First Team All Conference were senior infielder/pitcher Kris Lamm from Tacoma, Wash., and junior catcher Blake

BRINGIN' THE HEAT

The Lady Panthers had high hopes for the 2002 season but fell just a little short in the end of their final goal of winning the conference, losing 3-4 to eventual MCAC champ, Bellevue University. Head Coach Rex Reynolds orchestrated a great year and finished the regular season 26/19 and 7/5 in the conference.

close-knit group of girls. Last year we really only had one bona fide pitcher, and she transferred closer to home. So pitching was the main focus for recruiting this year," said Reynolds. "I feel we have six girls who can give us solid innings on the mound this year."

Midseason Reynolds commented, "This is easily the best team from a chemistry point of view. They have worked very hard together, and they are a very

Highlights of the season were the great road trips. The team made its way down to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, for spring break and finished 6/4 against teams from the east and Midwest. Faribault, Minn.. sophomore Kate Walsh said, "This was a great trip for team bonding; we all hung out together most of the time and also took time for ourselves. We had a lot of fun on and off the field."

The team's best tournament was the Dennis Gault Invite in Kansas City where they went 4/1 against teams from Missouri and Kansas. These wins came soon after learning the team was ranked No. 7 in Region IV. "This is only the second time York has ever been ranked, so it's a big deal to our program," commented Reynolds.

Chico, Calif., junior Rachel Carter was named to the All Conference First Team as well as Kearney, Nebr., sophomore Mandy Larson. Second Team honors went to Walsh, Carolyn Barr, senior from Seattle, Wash., and Stef Brigance, West Columbia, Texas, freshman. Amanda Watts, Krissy Harlan, Emiko Noma, and Kristi Buhrman made All Conference Honorable Mention.

Roger Collins, Associate Professor of Business, completed his sixth year as Head Coach for track and cross country. This spring he had 3 athletes qualify for the 2002 NCCAA national track meet. Justin Stoll competed in the 3,000 meter steeplechase and finished 12th with a school record time of 10:10.12. Jeremy Peters placed 14th in the high jump with a jump of 1.83 meters.

Seniors Aaron Fletcher and Katie Hulstrom qualified but did not compete because of graduation conflicts. Fletcher qualified in both the 800 and 1500 meter runs (both school records, 1:58.76 and 4:06.54, respectively). Hulstrom qualified in the 1500 meter run with a school record time of 5:06.54.

Coach Frank Chapman would tell you that the Men's Golf Team would like to have a few putts back and maybe use a mulligan for an errant drive here and there, but overall they had a good showing this spring. With one man down, their best finish was placing third out of ten teams at the York Invite. Brian Rea, a junior from North Platte, Nebr., led the team with a 73 followed by Lakewood, Colo., freshman Dustin Radcliff's 75.

Assistant Coach Bill Thomas commented, "This was by far our best effort of the year, and the kids have been really practicing hard, and working to get better. The problem we have is we only have four golfers, and all teams take five with them to the meet, so the guys really have to work extra hard."

Aside from the first tournament in which he scored an 80 in both rounds,

Quinn Hanson, a junior from Wahoo, Nebr., stayed in the 70's throughout the remaining nine rounds of the year. At the Tabor College Invite he shot rounds of 71 and 79, tying for first place in the individual standings. His average of 76.5 was followed by McCook, Nebr., junior Anthony Davis's 79.3, Rea's 80 average, and Radcliff at 83.3.

Coach Chapman has several recruits signed for next year that will add more depth to the squad.

YC BASKETBALL HONORS

Panther Basketball provided some of the best entertainment of the year for the YC student body as together the teams combined for an 18/7 home season. Coaches and fans alike favored the quick up and down style of play and high scoring contests.

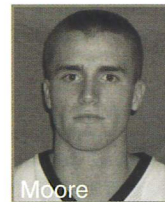

Head Coach Gerry Nixon guided the Lady Panthers to a 20/12 record season with a 96-90 shootout conference victory on the road. First year Head Coach Derek Harrell led the men to a .500 regular season with 16 wins and a 7/5 MCAC record (3rd in the conference).

Both the men and women's basketball teams garnered their share of postseason awards. Senior post player Misty Wellman from York was chosen NAIA All-American Third Team, and Tyrone Nash, a senior guard from Oklahoma City, was named NAIA All-American Honorable Mention. Both Wellman and Nash were selected for the All-Nebraska Team.

All Conference Team honors went to Wellman, Nash, and junior forward Adam Moore from Apple Valley, Calif. Earning MCAC Honorable Mention were Ginger Gatliff, a freshman guard from Lawton, Okla., Jen Spickelmier, a freshman forward from Harvard, Nebr., and Kevin Banks, a junior forward from Albuquerque, N.M.

In March 2002, Mahan released her debut self-titled CD, and made York one of her first tour stops.

Last month, York College received two unique and distinct gifts from YC alumni. During our finals' week, Nashville based singer-songwriter Steff Mahan ('82) left her band at home for the long trip back to York, her first in twenty years, to donate an acoustic performance.

Students took a break from their studies and thoroughly enjoyed the concert with songs such as "When I Understood Love" and "I Tend to Lose Things" and the stories behind them.

Visiting Mahan's website at www.steffmahan.com you read that "she plays music because she loves it and she makes CDs not for fame or fortune (thought neither is unwelcome), but because she wants to share this love with others."

She autographed my CD, "Love that YC Experience!"

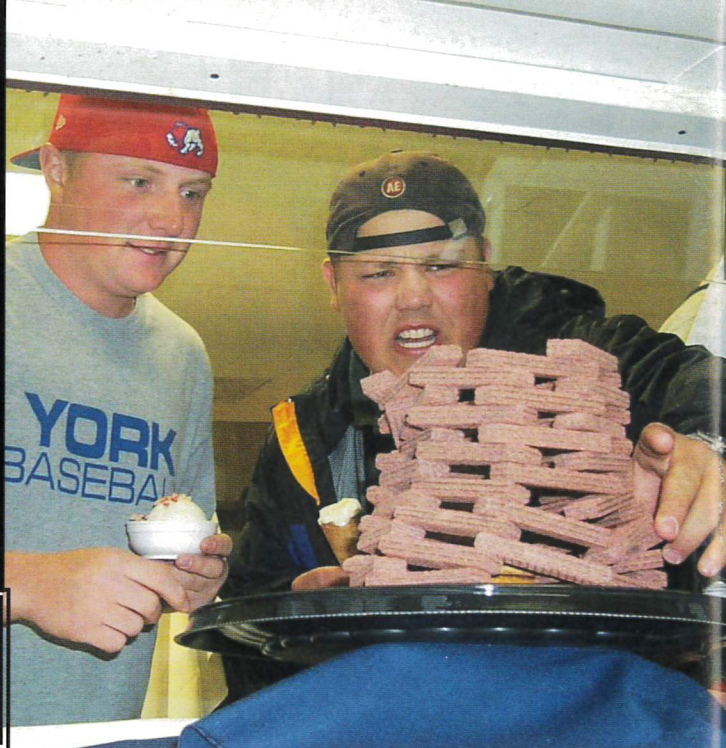

Etched on the back of the chalice is the detailed likeness of "Old Main."

The second issue of the Heritage featured the 1899 faculty on the cover with William E. Schell as President (1897-1913). The following issue included a letter to the editor from Vivian (Johns '29) Wehrbein that thanked us for recognizing her grandfather. She also wrote, "...I will never forget York College and have an abiding interest in its progress. I am so thankful that it is in such good hands and continues to be a Christian school."

That "abiding interest" gave us quite a surprise on May 29 when Vivian and her nephew, Dr. Arthur Murdoch ('56), gave to York College several memorabilia items including Dr. Murdoch's freshman beanie, band hat and letter, and a pen-nant. A framed picture of the YC family around 1912 and a large silver chalice given to President Schell by the class of 1913 for his sixteen years of service made the presentation an extraordinary experience.

U.S. Senator Ben Nelson of Nebraska addressed the 2002 record graduating class during spring commencement. (Right) Ryan Parker and Jay Powers discover life's "Jenga" during the pre-finals ice cream social Sunday evening.
